

Leadership Qualities

#1 - Courage

Courageous leaders have a proactive relationship with their environment; they act rather than react. These leaders seek out information and are entirely informed of potential risks and dangers but are still willing to face challenges head on.

#2 - Humility

Humble leaders lead quietly but confidently, share credit, and find ways to serve others. They are approachable and drive out fear by allowing people to contribute, experiment, and develop their talents.

#3 - Accountability

Leaders who are accountable for their decisions, behavior, and actions take ownership of the choices they make, and they don't dodge responsibility when the results are poor.

#4 - Trustworthy

Trustworthy leaders are consistent with their words and actions. Trust is built over time and is developed by actively listening, acting as a resource, empowering others, being responsive, and recognizing accomplishments.

#5 - Communication

Leaders who communicate well with others can use this skill to gain a better understanding of those around them, build trust, align goals and actions, plan and execute strategies, and ultimately achieve desired goals.

#6 - Conviction

Leaders with conviction possess a passionate determination to achieve plans and goals; the intense drive, focus, and persistence necessary to succeed at everything they set their minds to.

#7 - Collaboration

Collaborative leaders allow people to share responsibility and combine the knowledge, creativity, and experience of others. They are able to produce synergistic, creative, win-win solutions.

#8 - Aligned

Aligned leaders take an interest in anything that affects the productivity and welfare of the team. It means moving beyond your own personal agenda and fully supporting the implementation of the team's agenda.
